Sharon Hospital Rural residency program aims to ease primary care shortage

By Alec Linden

SHARON — A new program bringing medical residents to Sharon Hospital aims to show young doctors what working in rural healthcare is like — and hopefully convince them to stay.

“There is such a need for primary care doctors here,” said Dr. Kristin Newton, a family medicine practitioner at Sharon Hospital who coordinates Sharon’s participation in the program, which is based out of New Milford Hospital’s Family Medicine Center.

The Northwest Corner is in the midst of a decades-long primary care shortage, and Newton said that family medicine doctors bring holistic “cradle to grave” care to underserved communities.

Sharon Hospital is in its second month hosting family medicine residents as they rotate between departments at different hospitals throughout their three-year residency. A residency is essentially an intensive training period for medical school graduates — “their transition period where they learn a specialty,” as Newton put it.

Residents spend one month working directly with Newton and other attending physicians in internal care in Sharon between other core rotations back in New Milford or at other Connecticut hospitals, such as Danbury. Newton said that bringing early career physicians to the Northwest Corner offers a different perspective than programs at the bigger, more urban hospitals in the state, and also may encourage young doctors to put down roots in the area.

“Having residency programs in locations where people want to settle and raise their families and practice long term, I think, is so important,” she said.

2025 Region One student survey

Connected and confident — but increasingly anxious

By Christian Murray

Most Region One students say they feel safe at school, have a trusted adult in their lives and are confident about their future. At the same time, significant numbers continue to report stress, anxiety and, in some cases, thoughts of self-harm, according to the 2025 Youth Voices Count Survey released Wednesday, Feb. 11.

The districtwide survey of students in grades 7 through 12 was conducted in May and June and gathered responses from 422 students — a 75.4% participation rate. The findings are used to guide prevention efforts and student support strategies.

Superintendent Melony Brady-Shanley said the results show both strong support systems and rising emotional strain among students.

“For the most part, our kids feel like they have a trusted adult in their life, whether it’s a school member, a family member...that they trust, that they can speak to,” Brady-Shanley said, noting that was a very positive finding.

However, “I think the one thing that stands out for me is, you know, the amount of anxiousness that our kids are feeling.”

Conducted by Weyland Smith Consulting, LLC, a Wethersfield-based firm specializing in youth behavioral health research, the survey measures student perceptions related to mental health, substance use, school climate, bullying, social media and other behavioral indicators.

Strong safety and support indicators

The survey found high levels of connection and safety among students.

More than 94.6% said they have at least one trusted adult they can turn to. Similarly, 94% reported feeling safe in their community, and 88.6% said they feel safe at school. More than 92.4% said they know how to get help if they need it. About 73.8% said their life is headed in a positive direction, and 79.7% reported confidence in their future.

“It is very positive, you know, I

Chocolate Fest delivers sweet success in Kent

By Ruth Epstein

KENT — Calorie counting was put aside on Wednesday, Feb. 11, as the Kent Center School Scholarship Fund held its 29th annual Chocolate Fest.

When the event opened, a line was nearly out the door as participants readied to fill a plate of confectionary treats not only to satisfy a sweet tooth, but help local students offset some college costs.

For $5, patrons could fill a red paper plate from a huge assortment of mouth-watering cookies, candies, brownies, chocolate-covered pretzels and more, all donated by individuals and local businesses. For an extra fee, fest-goers could have a skewer of fresh fruit or marshmallows soaked under a fountain of sweet liquid, with the treat resulting in a sea of chocolate-covered faces.

As would be expected, the room was filled with abundant smiles as folks of all ages indulged, with several comments about the joys of chocolate being heard.

The event was the brainchild of the late Charlotte Lindsey, who served on the board of directors of the fund. She had lived in Maine for a time, had seen such a fundraiser there and proposed it be tried. It found immediate success and has become a tradition since its inception.

Board of Ed eyes 6% cost hike for coming school year

By Patrick L. Sullivan

FALLS VILLAGE — The Region One Board of Education is reviewing early 2026-27 budget numbers that indicate a 6% increase, or about $1.1 million, over the current fiscal year.

At the board’s regular meeting Monday, Feb. 2, Region One business manager Sam Herrick reported that the initial stages of crafting the new budget are underway.

Herrick said he and the board’s budget committee started at a 9% increase. At the Feb. 2 meeting the figure was

Kent considers options for Swift House

The selectmen discussed the future of the Swift House and formed a committee to determine what to do with the historic town-owned building. More at lakevillejournal.com

POLICE BLOTTER: TROOP B

The following information was provided by the Connecticut State Police at Troop B. All suspects are considered innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

Too fast for conditions

Stephania Cruz-Martinez, 34, of Waterbury, was west-bound on Lime Rock Road at approximately 6 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 7 in a 2024 International tractor-trailer when the truck lost traction on a downhill right curve. The truck exited the roadway and struck a utility pole, partially clipping its base. Cruz-Martinez was issued a written warning for traveling too fast for conditions. The truck was driven from the scene.

Criminal mischief charge

Brian Allyn Jr., 44, of East Canaan, was arrested and charged with criminal mischief, 2nd degree, and disorderly conduct on Monday, Feb. 9 after troopers responded to 35 Moses Mead Road in North Canaan late on Sunday, Feb. 8, for the report of a non-active disturbance. Allyn was transported to Troop B and was released on a $1,000 non-surety bond, with a court appearance set for Torrington Superior Court.

Subaru flip over

Unpredictable snow drifts were cited in a one-vehicle accident northbound on Route 63 in the town of Canaan on Monday, Feb. 9 at approximately 3:40 a.m. James Gulyas, 41 of Falls Village, was driving his 2018 Subaru Crosstrek when he encountered snow drifts that had crossed the road. The vehicle left the road, hit a wall and flipped over an unknown number of times, coming to rest rightside up. Gulyas was issued a warning for failure to drive right. The Subaru was towed by Arnold's Garage.

BMW and Mercedes in passing accident

On Thursday, Feb. 12 at approximately 11:15 a.m. a BMW X5 and a Mercedes GLE were traveling west-bound on Route 4 in Sharon behind a box truck. The BMW, driven by Erik Lambro, 52, of Bethlehem, CT, began to pass the Mercedes, driven by George Flynn, 76, of Kent. Troopers state that as Lambro was passing Flynn, Flynn's Mercedes struck the passenger side of the BMW. The BMW continued to pass the Mercedes and the box truck ahead, then pulled over to stop and signaled for the Mercedes to stop. The Mercedes didn't stop and left the scene, and was later located with visible damage. Flynn was issued an infraction for failure to maintain lane.

Domestic violence arrests

Troop B was notified of a domestic violence incident on Saturday, Feb. 14 in North Canaan. An investigation led to the arrest of Javier Otero, 29, of North Canaan. Otero was arrested at the scene and charged with Risk of Injury to a Child, Disorderly Conduct, Assault 3rd degree, and Threatening. A court date was set for Torrington Superior Court.

The Lakeville Journal will publish the outcome of police charges. Send mail to P.O. Box 1688, Lakeville, CT 06039, Attn: Police Blotter, or send an email editor@lakeville-journal.com

NORTH CANAAN — North Canaan's housing market posted strong gains in 2025, with both home prices and sales activity rising sharply over the previous year.

The median price of a single-family home increased 16% to $340,000, up from $292,250 in 2024.

Sales volume also saw a significant jump last year. A total of 29 homes sold in 2025 — nearly triple the 10 transactions recorded the year before — marking one of the biggest increases in activity among Northwest Corner towns.

Despite the rise in prices, North Canaan remains the most affordable housing market in the region. The town's $340,000 median is less than half that of neighboring Salisbury, where the 2025 median reached $825,000. It is also well below Sharon ($702,500), Cornwall ($750,000), Falls Village ($657,500) and Kent

Snow bills pile up in Falls Village

By Patrick L. Sullivan

FALLS VILLAGE — The heavy winter has taken a toll on Falls Village's snow clearing budget.

At the regular monthly selectmen's meeting Monday, Feb. 9, First Selectman Dave Barger said the town has used about 86% of its budget for materials and overtime, and that doesn't include the numbers from the most recent and biggest storm of the season.

In other business, Barger reported that after two years, Town Hall is finally going to be connected to the Connecticut Education Network (CEN) fiber optic internet service.

The board also discussed upcoming infrastructure work.

There will be a meeting in March with representatives from Cardinal Engineering and the state Department of Transportation on the plans for replacing the bridge and culvert on Cobble Road.

The selectmen also made an appointment, naming Mark Gonzonsky to the Housatonic River Commission to replace Dick Heinz. Gonzonsky was an alternate member, and Colter Rule will take over that role.

Finally, the selectmen thanked Lou Timolat for his service as the town's representative to the Torrington Area Health District. Barger noted that what was supposed to be a temporary arrangement turned into 20 years of service.

Salisbury joins trash authority, reviews finances at town meeting

By Patrick L. Sullivan

SALISBURY — At the annual town meeting Wednesday, Feb. 11, voters in Salisbury approved an ordinance allowing the town to join the fledgling Northwest Regional Recovery Authority.

The authority was founded by the City of Torrington in 2025 in an effort to maintain a public municipal solid waste solution in northwest Connecticut. Towns have until June 30, 2027, to secure hauling contracts following the 2022 closure of the trash-to-energy plant in Hartford.

The Northwest Hills Council of Governments, representing 21 towns, is helping to organize the initiative. Salisbury joined Torrington and Goshen in the authority, with many other municipalities planning to vote on the ordinance in the near future.

The immediate goal of the authority is to take over operations at the Torrington Transfer Station.

Voters also approved receipt of the audited financial statement for fiscal year 2025. Board of Finance chair Pari Forood said the town remains “in a very healthy financial position,” with total assets and deferred outflows of $53 million and total liabilities of $9 million, leaving net assets of $44 million.

At the end of FY25, the general fund balance was $6.68 million, with $4.03 million reserved. The remaining $2.65 million is unreserved and represents 13% of the town’s annual operating budget.

Forood noted that the state Office of Policy and Management recommends that towns maintain between 10% and 15% of their general fund in surplus for emergencies.

Forood said that state law limits the amount of general obligation debt a government entity may issue to seven times the total tax collections for the prior year.

ing her work on overseeing the town’s cemeteries and the extensive oral history project, which now has some 430 interviews in text and audio formats.

And the voters approved an ordinance granting a limited real property tax exemption for residents who are veterans and have a service-related total disability that prevents employment. Rand said the ordinance applies to two individuals in town and was included at the request of assessor Kayla Johnson.

There were 23 electors present at Town Hall. The vote of those present was unanimous on all four agenda items.

There were a handful of voters online, but the information on how they voted was not available at press time.

Mark Capecelatro was the moderator. He thanked everyone for coming.

Town report highlights active year for municipal services in Salisbury

By Patrick L. Sullivan

SALISBURY — The annual town report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2025, has been published and was formally received at the annual town meeting Wednesday, Feb. 11.

The report is dedicated to former town historian Jean McMillen and includes department updates, municipal data and summaries of the town’s operations over the past year. Among the report’s highlights:

Animal Control Officer Lee Sohl reported investigating 84 calls and complaints involving missing pets, roaming dogs, four dog bites and various domestic and wild animal concerns. No tickets were issued. Two dogs were impounded — one stray and one for biting. In total, Sohl noted “five fewer calls, fewer dogs picked up, double the bites from last year.”

The report lists the town’s 14 parks and forest areas.

Don Mayland, chair of the Water Pollution Control Authority, wrote the town is anticipating growth through new housing and the potential redevelopment of the Wake Robin Inn.

“The current collection and treatment facilities are adequate to handle this potential expansion. However, because of water getting into the current collection pipes, due to influx and infiltration, our ability to accommodate new housing units is somewhat compromised.”

He wrote the town has relined pipes for years but more work remains. Influx and infiltration occur through leaking main pipes and laterals serving existing housing units.

Scoville celebrates Valentine’s Day

By Patrick L. Sullivan

SALISBURY — A group of about 15 adults and children got together after hours at the Scoville Memorial Library Wednesday, Feb. 11, to make Valentine’s Day cards and bracelets. The artistic activities were presided over by Ali DeProdolini.

Theodore Blevins-Fleishman, age 5, was working on a bracelet, assisted by DeProdolini with his father, Jeff Blevins, offering encouragement. It took a while, but eventually the bracelet was finished.

Amid the general hubbub, Jeff Blevins temporarily misplaced his son.

“Where did he go?”

Young Theodore had made a dash for the refreshment table.

It was a cheerful scene on a chilly night.

Social Services Director Patrice McGrath reported 23 households received fuel deliveries and/or furnace tune-ups through the Salisbury Family Services fuel bank.

At Scoville Memorial Library, Director Karin Goodell wrote that program attendance increased 25% and use of the library for work and meetings rose 30%. The library circulated approximately 45,000 physical and digital items and added 185 new cardholders, bringing the total number of active users to 1,900 — “almost half the town,” Goodell noted.

Kent Republicans host candidates for governor

By Ruth Epstein

KENT — Ben Proto, chairman of the state Republican Party, urged members to unite in order to secure victory in November. Proto delivered his remarks Sunday, Feb. 15, at the Lincoln Day Dinner hosted by the Kent Republican Town Committee at the Bulls Bridge Inn. The dining room was filled with loyal party members — some traveling long distances — to hear candidates seeking offices ranging from governor to Congress.

“The most important thing we need to do is to be unified,” Proto said. He pointed to what he described as Connecticut residents struggling with high energy costs, rising insurance premiums and escalating housing prices, and praised those seeking spots on the Republican ticket. “Id take any of the three [gubernatorial] candidates over Lamont and any of the three [congressional] over Hayes,” he said, drawing loud applause.

Among the three Republicans running for governor is Erin Stewart, former mayor of New Britain. Repeating the phrase “It’s time for something different” throughout her speech, Stewart argued that one-party Democratic control has led to what she described as the highest cost of living in the nation, soaring electric bills, young families leaving the state and seniors being taxed out of their homes.

She rejected the notion that Gov. Ned Lamont is unbeatable, pointing to polling data and highlighting her record as mayor, including balancing budgets, cutting taxes and standing up to special interests.

Stewart said she would lower income taxes, reduce taxes on businesses and eliminate the car tax.

Raising her voice for emphasis, she added that parents should have the final say in health care decisions for their children, including vaccines; that biological males should not be in female locker rooms; that parents deserve school choice; that late-term and partial-birth abortions are morally wrong and should be illegal; and that she supports lawful gun owners and would oppose further restrictions on Second Amendment rights.

Also seeking the Republican nomination for governor is Betsy McCaughey, a Connecticut native and former lieutenant governor of New York under George Pataki. McCaughey, who hosts Newsmax’s “Wake Up America Weekend” and writes a column for the New York Post, said her primary goal is to “eliminate the state income tax and bring prosperity back to my childhood home.”

Referring to the governor as “Lefty Lamont,” McCaughey pledged to block implementation of his housing law. She also vowed to freeze home reassessments on her first day in office and push for bipartisan legislation to cap annual property tax increases at 2%. She criticized Lamont for having “his head in the sand” on key issues.

The third Republican in the race is Ryan Fazio, a state senator representing the 36th District, which includes Greenwich, Stamford and New Canaan.

“This is my home state, and I see people being hurt because we have the third-highest tax rate and third-highest electric rates in the country.” He cited his legislative record as evidence that he can deliver change.

Ryan Fazio, standing, speaks with constituents in Kent. He is running for governor.

“My top priority is to eliminate the electric benefits charge, which could result in cutting electric rates by 20%,” he said, noting he helped secure greater transparency by requiring the charge to be itemized on utility bills. “I also propose to deliver a large income tax cut, resulting in a savings of $1,500 for an average family.”

Fazio said he would seek to reduce health care costs by increasing competition, slow the growth of state spending and reduce reliance on debt financing.

All three gubernatorial candidates voiced support for President Donald Trump. McCaughey served on his 2016 transition team, and Fazio said he admires and respects Trump’s public service.

Other candidates in attendance included Michele Botelho, Chris Shea and Jonathan De Barros, who are seeking the 5th Congressional District seat currently held by Jahana Hayes; Fred Wilms, a candidate for state treasurer; and Matt Corey, who is running for lieutenant governor.

Solar power project advances in Kent

By Alec Linden

KENT — The Sewer Commission plans to move ahead with a proposal from the Connecticut Green Bank to install a solar array at Kent’s sewage treatment plant, Commission Chair Elissa Potts announced at the Feb. 10 meeting.

The project is part of the Green Bank’s Solar Marketplace Assistance Program, known as MAP+. Under the proposal, the town would pay nothing upfront, and the system could reduce the plant’s electric bills by as much as 85%.

Potts said the commission is likely to pursue the smaller of two options presented by the Green Bank in November 2025, citing grid constraints. That system would generate 81.6 kilowatts, compared with a larger 260-kilowatt design.

The array would be installed on treatment plant property between Schaghticoke Road and the Housatonic River, land the town leases from Kent School.

The Green Bank has set a July 1 deadline to finalize plans, including labor and materials, amid uncertainty following the Trump administration’s July 4 budget bill, which significantly reduced federal subsidies for renewable energy.

Blue Valentine performs at Hunt Library for Midwinter Night in the Village Saturday, Feb. 14.

Making midwinter memories at Hunt

By Patrick L. Sullivan

FALLS VILLAGE — Music, poetry and Shakespeare filled the David M. Hunt Library during its Midwinter’s Night in the Village fundraiser Saturday, Feb. 14, with Blue Valentine closing the evening’s program to great applause.

The group — with Brook Martinez on guitar and vocals, Leo Martinez on lead guitar and vocals, and Sara Heller on vocals — finished the entertainment with a set that included songs by Tim Buckley, Fleetwood Mac, and three Lennon-McCartney compositions, “Dear Prudence,” “If I Fell” and “Revolution 1.”

Adam Sher served as emcee for the evening and sang a song himself. Urging guests to shift their attention from browsing and socializing to the stage, he said: “It’s not competitive, but objectively the David M. Hunt Library is the best.”

Anna Pattison, James King and Gerry Stanton read poetry, and Jandi Hanna performed a scene from “As You Like It.”

Dana Domenick’s performance of “Vanilla Ice Cream” from the musical “She Loves Me” received enthusiastic applause.

Vance Cannon reflected on the season, noting that Northwest Connecticut was experiencing a “regular winter.” He added: “By late February it definitely gets on your nerves.”

Cannon then launched into songs by Gordon Lightfoot and Carole King (by way of James Taylor), showcasing his fingerpicking skills.

North Canaan selects new budget auditor

By Riley Klein

NORTH CANAAN — The Board of Finance selected a new auditor for the Town of North Canaan at its regular meeting Wednesday, Feb. 11.

Sinnamon & Associates, based in North Canaan, was the lowest bidder for auditing services of the three proposals submitted. The rate was $35,000 per year for the next three fiscal years.

Sinnamon was chosen by a vote of 3-1 with Chairman Doug Humes voting “nay.” Humes felt Sinnamon’s bid could not be accepted because the board’s subcommittee did not have time to discuss the proposal prior to the meeting.

Sinnamon replaced King and King, the previous auditor for the town. King’s rate was the highest of the three firms: $49,875 for 2026-27, $52,365 for 2027-28 and $54,985 for 2028-29.

Humes was inclined to keep King and King as the town auditor because he has been pleased with its work in the past. “You get what you pay for,” he said.

The third bid was from Clairemont Associates with the following rate: $42,300 for 2026-27, $42,500 for 2027-28, and $42,800 for 2028-29.

Board of Finance member Christian Allyn said he was impressed with Clairemont, but felt Sinnamon was the best choice given its track record with other towns in the area.

She loved collecting and displaying her dolls for the community. She would take her dog on walks to listen to the church bell ringing. Roberta's greatest joy came as she helped take care of her grandchildren. That opportunity provided Roberta with some of her fondest and most precious memories. Roberta is remembered as a person who always had a story to tell...and a helping hand to lend. Always one to stay active, Roberta became the President of the Resident's Council of The Geer Health and Rehabilitation Center in Canaan.

Roberta is survived by her two children; Robert D. "Bob" Stevens of Millerton, and Donna M. Archer of Rockledge, Pennsylvania; her brother Frederick G. Briggs, and her sister Annette Shaffer. Roberta was predeceased by her sister June Briggs. Roberta is also survived by her two grandsons; Robert Stevens Jr. and his partner Elizabeth Gillett of Austin, Texas, and Josh Archer and his wife Ashley Archer Monteiro of Jenkintown, Pennsylvania.

There will be a small private service and celebration of Roberta's life in the future. Arrangements are under the care of the Newkirk-Palmer Funeral Home 118 Main St. Canaan, CT 06018.

Tilden W. Southack

SHARON — Tilden W. Southack Jr. a longtime resident of Sharon passed Feb. 13, 2026, peacefully, hand in hand with the person he cared about most, Karlee McGhee and a couple of his employees and friends.

He was born May 25, 1950, the son of Jean (Bunny) Southack and Tilden Southack, and brother to Barbara (Bobby) Southack and Sally Southack.

Tilden graduated high school from Wooster School of Danbury and earned a college degree in business and economics from Colorado State University. Tilden told stories of being the manager of a varsity football team and hockey team during his time at Wooster.

After his immediate family had passed or moved on, Tilden continued to run his family farm, Whitetail Farm in Sharon. He poured his blood, sweat and tears into every last inch of soil there and cared for his Angus cattle and Percheron horses and a handful of cats with the help of Karlee McGhee, Wayne McGhee, Scott Garay, Charles Parmalee, and Preslyn Handlowich as well as some high school boys as Tilden called them. Tilden also enjoyed anything that could go fast, whether that was a motorcycle or a corvette that he had fixed up to make 10x more horsepower than it did before. Just as much he loved to tell stories about it to the people he held close. He was like a muscle car, he might yell and scream at you, but he would've given you all he had. He wasn't an easy person to read/understand, and he kept to himself about most things but if he allowed you to grow close to him and he said "Thank you" you were a lucky person.

He is survived by his chosen family; Karlee McGhee and Wayne McGhee and three nephews, Eric Muller, Bogart Muller, and James DiGanzi.

There will be calling hours on Saturday, Feb. 21, from 10:00 a.m. until 12:00 p.m. Burial will be held in the spring at Sharon East Side Cemetery.

The Kenny Funeral Home has care of arrangements.

Carolyn G. McCarthy

LAKEVILLE — Carolyn G. McCarthy, 88, a long time resident of Indian Mountain Road, passed away peacefully at home on Feb. 7, 2026.

She was born on Sept. 8, 1937, in Hollis, New York. She was the youngest daughter of the late William James and Ruth Anderson Gedge of Indian Mountain Road.

Carolyn's first job out of high school was at the Time and Life building in Manhattan, New York. In 1956, she went on to work for Capital Airlines until they disbanded. She began banking in White Plains, New York, where she met her husband Edward James McCarthy. They started their family and relocated to Pleasant Valley, New York. She then returned to banking in Poughkeepsie, New York and later pursued real estate.

Carolyn was very creative and enjoyed home making, gardening, sewing, knitting, cooking and baking. Her Christmas cookies were always remarkable. She had a pioneer spirit and embraced the toil of yard chores. She was very independent and at 87 she still shoveled the driveway in the winter, mowed the grass, trimmed the bushes, raked the leaves and dragged the brush. She took pride in the manicure of the grounds where she resided.

Carolyn was a wonderful mother who had an enormous heart. She loved all animals, wild or tame. She will be dearly missed by her family and the people that knew her.

She is predeceased by her husband, Edward McCarthy Sr., her brother Dr. Stafford Gedge of Minnesota, nephews, William, James and Robert and niece Christine.

She is survived by her son, Edward (Anne) McCarthy of Greenfield, Massachusetts and grandsons James and Theodore, son Sean McCarthy of Oak Hill, New York, sister Nancy Dougherty of South Carolina, nieces Lynn Warner and Debra Phillips.

A private service will be held at a later date. The Kenny Funeral Home has care of arrangements.

'A beautiful soul': Kent mourns Robbie Kennedy

By Ruth Epstein

KENT — A sense of sadness pervaded the town this week as news of the death of Robert (Robbie) Kennedy spread. Kennedy died Monday, Feb. 9, at the age of 71.

Kennedy was a beacon of light, known by legions of citizens, if not personally, but as the guy who could be seen riding his bicycle in all kinds of weather, determined to get to his destination; yet always taking the time for a wave. Kennedy faced challenges, but there were no barriers when it came to making an impact on all who knew him.

Remembrances of him abounded in conversations throughout town and on the hundreds of messages posted on social media. His sister-in-law, Apple Kennedy, summed up what everyone was saying — "a beautiful soul."

The son of the late John and Olga Kennedy, Kennedy was born in Guam. His father, a physician, worked for the World Health Organization and was chief of public health for USAID. The family, which consisted of eight children, lived on and off overseas and would come back to Kent during leaves. Kennedy attended the Devereux School before entering Housatonic Valley Regional High School, graduating in 1974.

His sister Gretchen Kennedy said in their early days in Kent, her brother would walk her infant son in his stroller and visit all the businesses. That was his introduction to townspeople and how he became an integral part of the community. Joe Bianchi kept his cows in the Kennedys' barn, she said, which sparked Kennedy's deep love of animals. "He worshipped the ground Joe walked on, and would so look forward to him coming every afternoon to feed the animals and bring him candy."

His sister said the family was overwhelmed by the outpouring of support and kind words about her brother. "He loved life to the fullest. His sudden death spared him so much pain and loss of independence. It was very much a blessing."

Gary Davis, former owner of the local IGA supermarket, recalled how his mother, the late Anne Davis, hired Kennedy 31 years ago. He worked until Covid hit. He was assigned specific tasks, such as unloading trucks, cleaning the store or cardboard compaction. Davis said he took his responsibilities seriously, was always courteous with the customers and was a joy to be around.

"Robbie was never in a bad mood," said Davis. "It worked out for us and for him. He was considered part of the IGA family. Recently I got together with him a lot. It's tough to lose a buddy. I miss him so much."

Davis echoed what many were saying about Kennedy. "Everybody knew him and he knew everybody. He was a real town character." His sister said some dubbed him, "The mayor of Kent."

Always eager to be involved and yearning companionship, Kennedy wanted very much to be part of the Kent Volunteer Fire Department. Member Ed Matson said he was honored to be named an active emergency member. He would ride his bike from his then-home in north Kent to the firehouse for meetings. "When his bike failed him, we all chipped in to buy him a new one that even had a flashing light to ensure his safety."

The department put out a statement about his death, saying "His smile, his wave and his spirit will be missed greatly, not just by his KVFD family, but so many in our community."

Matson spoke about Kennedy never uttering a bad word about anyone. "He was a simple, caring person who tried to help everyone. Many people didn't know the things he did for others." But those who were neighbors of Kennedy when he moved to Templeton Farms senior apartments, knew first-hand how he would always give assistance. Ruth Woodward described his kind acts, including shoveling snow off cars or bringing residents their mail. "He had such a big heart," she said.

Ben Martin met Kennedy when they both attended youth park and recreation games: Martin as a dad and Kennedy as a spectator. Martin is the football coach at Kent School and just before the season started two years ago, he invited Kennedy to be his volunteer assistant coach. It was a deep honor and a responsibility he took seriously. He would do all the tasks asked of him, along with encouraging accountability from the players. "He was my right-hand man," said Martin. "Often he and I were the first at practice and the last to leave. The kids really loved him. He was my best buddy. We'd sometimes go out for lunch or to a movie. I valued my relationship with him."

Robert Sommer Kennedy

KENT — Robert "Rob" Kennedy (71), of Kent, devoted son of Dr. John E. Kennedy and Olga Sommer Kennedy, passed away unexpectedly on Monday, Feb. 9, 2026, at the home of his brother and sister-in-law in Kent. Rob was a long-time, well-loved member of the Kent community.

Born in Guam, Rob's early years were spent traveling the globe with his family for his dad's work as an MD in Micronesia, Cambodia, Laos, Indonesia, Thailand, and Zaire. In 1962 the family of 9 settled in Kent, Rob attended the Devereux School and graduated from Housatonic Valley Regional High School. Rob worked at South Kent School, where he was known for his good humor, and kindness toward students and staff. For most of his working life he could be found at Davis IGA in Kent, greeting customers with the warmth and familiarity that made him a recognizable and welcoming face in town.

Known to many in town as "Coach Rob," he spent countless hours volunteering with Kent Park & Recreation and at Kent School. His patience, enthusiasm, and genuine care for young people made him a beloved friend to generations of local kids.

Rob was also deeply connected to the community through his involvement with the Kent Volunteer Fire Department and St. Andrew's Church, both of which were important parts of his life. Rob loved caring for animals. For many years he kept sheep and a donkey at the family home- stead in North Kent. Neighborhood pets got daily walks while Rob lived in-town at Templeton Farms.

Rob is predeceased by his parents and infant brother, Michael. He is survived by 6 siblings; Kathleen Kennedy Enger (Filmora), John Kennedy (Kathleen), Karen Kennedy Wilson (Robert), Gretchen Kennedy, Clytie Kennedy, Jeffery Kennedy (Apple), 17 nieces and nephews, Uncle Donald Sommer, Nancy Sommer, and many friends who will miss him dearly.

A service is planned for May 9 at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Kent followed by a celebration of life at the Kent Fire House. In lieu of flowers, donations in Rob's memory may be sent to the Kent Volunteer Fire Department or St. Andrew's Church.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

East Mountain House appreciation

Many people may not yet know of a wonderful resource in Lakeville that made my husband's recent death so much easier to bear, both for him and our family. East Mountain House on Bostwick Street is dedicated to caring for people in the end stage of life who can not be kept comfortable at home.

Their mission statement mirrors our experience:

"East Mountain House is an End-of-Life Care Home guided by intrinsic goodness. We are an inclusive, community-centered haven where guests and their loved ones find compassionate, personalized, end-of-life care and support. We restore dignity to the dying process, ensuring that every person is surrounded by kindness and respect, regardless of financial means."

The house is home-like and cheerful, with sun streaming in and none of the cold clinical aspect of a hospital. The two bedrooms for "guests" are cozy and comfortable with ample chairs and sofas for family and friends to visit...even dog visits are allowed! Family can spend the night in this room, or in one of the rooms set aside for them upstairs.

The most important thing, however, is the hands-on care provided by the caregivers who are there day and night: warm, skilled, reassuring, deeply comforting. They made all the difference to my husband and my family.

We are so grateful to Keavy Bedell and Craig Davis for founding and continuing to care for this wonderful resource, to Cristin Rich, the Executive Director and to every member of the care-giving team.

Postal workers thankful for clean pathways

The Postal Service would like to thank customers who cleared pathways to their mailboxes following the recent snowstorm that brought bitter cold temperatures and snow to Norfolk and surrounding areas.

I am incredibly proud of our hard-working employees who are dedicated to keeping the mail moving in inclement weather and are extremely grateful to our customers who put on some warm clothes, grabbed a shovel and a bag of salt to keep our carriers safe while delivering mail.

Our team is proud to serve Norfolk. With your continued shared effort during winter weather, we can keep service moving while looking out for one another.

I would like to personally thank our customers for their patience during the recent repairs to Norfolk Post Office. Your support meant the world to us.

Lastly, we would like to publicly thank Antonio Alcalá, art director for the USPS, and everyone who visited the Norfolk Library on Feb. 7 and 8 to hear about history of stamp making and to all the kids who participated in making their own stamps.

Community involvement is what makes this job so special.

Married for four years, Robert W. Van Stone, son of a wealthy builder, and Annie L. Kelley of Bridgeport, have kept their marriage secret faithfully. Miss Kelley is a Catholic and Van Stone a Methodist so they decided to keep the marriage quiet until an opportune time came for revealing it. They have outwardly maintained a warm friendship. The fact that they were married June 10, 1897, at Port Chester, N.Y. became known the other day, and they confessed and received the parental blessing.

Members and friends of the Parmalee family testified last week in Litchfield Superior Court to buttress State's Attorney John Bianchi's contention that three Parmalee brothers had no involvement with the apparent robbery or the murder of Barbara Gibbons. The Parmalees were neighbors of Ms. Gibbons and her son Peter Reilly on Route 63 in Falls Village. At one time they and he were close friends.

CANAAN — The portable school classrooms are finally on their way to a new home across from the Canaan Town Hall. Contractor Richard Bunce and a crew worked for two days last week to hoist the double-classroom building on rollers and slowly move it across the road and into the town hall parking lot. Presently the building is resting on the rollers, waiting for the final move onto its new foundation next to the Town Hall.

Although events will continue throughout the year, most of Canaan's Bicentennial celebration will be concentrated during the month of July, according to Bicentennial Co-chairman Laura Freund.

their work — advanced social agendas, been advocates for kids, the elderly, women, minorities, health, education, human rights — is gapingly demolished.

Rosalyn Carter, in 1977, appointed a First Lady Chief of Staff; Rosalyn herself attended Cabinet meetings. From Lady Bird on, the First Lady staffs had been 15 +: using the First Lady's platform for social issues via speeches, visits, organizing. Melania's staff dropped to less than a dozen in T101. Now in T202, Melania's staff is five. With the East Wing demolished there is no First Lady's office, no place, no space and Be Best, Melania's anti-cyberbullying initiative commenced in T101, is invisible, silent, oddly tuned with Trump's online bully persona.

Woodrow Wilson's stroke in 1919 put his second wife

Edith in immense control of the Oval Office — some terming it "The Secret Presidency." Then with Franklin Roosevelt's election in 1932, Eleanor Roosevelt commenced her live long impact on the Presidency, the war, the country, rising to U.S. U.N. Delegate 1945 — 1953. Eleanor was prominent nationally and internationally for decades; Truman called her "the First Lady of the world" for her extended, substantial contribution to human rights.

In 1961, John Kennedy brought youth, sterling speech "ask not what your country can do for you, but you can do for your country", a Russia crisis with Khrushchev and stunning Class to his presidency. Jackie Kennedy with her classy attire, her French (a polyglot fluent in French, Spanish and Italian), her cultural predilection all precipitated on their Paris visit to Kennedy's "I am the man who accompanied Jacqueline Kennedy to Paris and I have enjoyed it."

Jackie's famed pillbox hat, small, centered atop her head, was diametrically opposed to Melania's "boater" hat worn at the 2025 inauguration. Melania's selection was seemingly a shield for her eyes, face from the people and, planned or not, a block for a Trump attempted kiss.

This video showed the American people the renovated White House state rooms, under Jacqueline's lead, with authentic, period-accurate furnishings — museum quality. The White House Historical Society, established in 1961, remains, thus far, a private, non-profit to protect, preserve and provide public access to the Executive Mansion.

First Ladies Johnson, Reagan, the Bushes, Clinton, Obama and Biden have all been visibly active using their platforms for social advancement — Clinton becoming an elected Senator, Secretary of State, and Presidential candidate. The East Wing did not make them prominent, influential, or active but it was there, acknowledged White House space. Its vacancy is significant.

The woman, Melania, wore a Zara jacket with huge lettering: "I Really Don't Care, Do U?" on the back for her 2018 trip to visit a Texas detention center for immigrant children. Prominent in her recent in-theatre documentary are Melania's ever present, ever-a-foot 5-inch stiletto heels -seemingly her personal symbol. Perhaps the elimination of the First Lady is being provoked by more than the demolishment of the East wing.

OBITUARIES

Ronald Ray Dirck

SHARON — Ronald Ray Dirck, affectionately known as Ron, passed away peacefully with his family at his side on Jan. 17, 2026, in Phoenix, Arizona, at the age of 85. Born on Jan. 31, 1940, in Sedalia, Missouri, Ron lived a life filled with warmth, laughter, and deep devotion to his family.

Ron shared an extraordinary 62-year marriage with his high school sweetheart and beloved wife, Jackie. Their enduring partnership was a shining example of living life to the fullest.

Ron served his country as a captain in the US Marine Corps, flying helicopters during the Vietnam War. He then flew commercially for TWA for 25 years, both domestically and internationally. He finished his flying career with Nippon Cargo Airlines. Ron enjoyed the outdoors and enjoyed taking care of their beloved Sharon, home for more than 50 years. He was also an avid builder and enjoyed his many projects over the years.

In retirement, Ron and Jackie split time between Sharon, and Phoenix, Arizona, before settling full-time in Phoenix two years ago. Ron loved his evening cocktails with Jackie and their many friends, as well as a hand or two of gin rummy.

He was a devoted father to Melissa Dirck Appel and her husband, Jeff Appel, and Patrick Dirck and his wife, Lisa Dirck. He carried the memory of his son Kevin with enduring love throughout his life. His legacy continues through his cherished grandchildren; Alexandra, Caroline, Emma, Natalie, Evan, Cooper, Elle, and Tanner. Ron is also fondly remembered by his brother, Jim and wife Lena.

Ron had a tender heart for animals. The loyal companionship of his beloved dogs Mini and Mae brought him comfort and joy over the years.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Jackie, and parents, Raymond and Gladys Dirck.

In honor of Ron's love of animals, the family asks that, in lieu of flowers, donations be made to The Aussie and Friends Rescue, www.aussiefriendsrescue.com.

His light lives on in the hearts of all who knew him. May his memory continue to bring comfort and smiles to those he touched.

A private celebration of life for the family will be held at a later date.

Linda Lyles Goodyear

CANAAN — Linda Lyles Goodyear was born in Bronxville, New York, on June 17, 1936, to Molly Gayer Lyles and James Adam Lyles. She died peacefully in her sleep on Feb. 4, 2026, of complications from dementia. As a child she spent her summers with her parents and sister, Sally, in Canaan at the family's home along the Blackberry River that was built in 1751 by her relative, Isaac Lawrence. Linda met the love of her life, Charles (Charlie) W. Goodyear, during her Bennett College years, and after graduating they married on Aug. 4, 1956.

The two lived a busy life, raising three children and moving to 10 different states over the course of Charlie's 43 year career with Exxon Mobil. Every two years Linda was setting up a new home, navigating new school systems with her kids and getting involved in volunteer activities.

Linda was active with the Junior League in Houston, Texas, served as Chairperson of the Darien, Connecticut, Green Team for many years and spent many hours helping at the "60+" Senior Center and the Darien Bird Sanctuary. The Town of Darien recognized Jan. 14, 2019, as Linda Goodyear Day for her accomplishments, dedication and loyal service to the town and its environmental causes.

Her other interests included photography and printing in a darkroom she set up at home, growing roses, playing piano, and sewing. Linda loved hosting parties and for decades she and Charlie held a Fourth of July gathering at their home which was the hit of the neighborhood, and was characterized by warm hospitality and Linda's creative, patriotic outfits.

Charlie and Linda were very active throughout their lives, traveling the world and participating in many sports including alpine skiing, running, hiking, canoeing, biking and tennis.

In 1998, they built a vacation home in Hailey, Idaho, as a family gathering place for their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Linda loved the beauty of the mountains and the opportunity to be in nature every day, but she especially loved being the matriarch of her ever-growing family.

Linda was very outgoing, and made new friends all over the world - people were drawn to her lovely smile, generous spirit and witty sense of humor. She was an incredibly caring person with boundless energy, a heart for service and love for others. Even in her final days her nurses and caregivers noted how sweet she was and how much she made them smile.

She is survived by her husband of almost 70 years, Charlie; her children, Chip (Elizabeth) Goodyear, Jim (Mary) Goodyear and Molly! Goodyear; her eight grandchildren; Charlie (Ellen) Goodyear, Adelaide Goodyear & fiance Alastair Sharp, Will (Jenny) Goodyear, Robert (Kacie) Goodyear, Annie (Spencer) Gorham, John Goodyear, Peter Wolter and Ella Wolter; three great-grandchildren, and her nieces Deb (Jim) Edwards, Amy (Bob) Clark and Chris (Ruth) Rees. She was preceded in death by her parents, James and Molly Lyles, and her sister, Sally Rees. She leaves behind many other relatives and friends who will miss her dearly.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society or a charity of your choice.

Republican senators top gov's tax cut by $1B

THE CHRIS POWELL COLUMN

If Connecticut's next state budget can be considered a sort of poker game of tax cutting, Gov. Ned Lamont has opened with $500 million and the minority Republicans in the state Senate have seen his $500 million and raised him $1 billion.

But it's not as hopeful for taxpayers as it looks.

The governor, a Democrat seeking election to a third term in November, proposes to spend $500 million to issue state tax "rebates" — $200 for single people and $400 for couples — a week ahead of Election Day. (If President Trump, a Republican, tried something like this, Democrats and most journalists would scream: "Bribery!")

If things go according to what seems like the Democratic plan, soon after the election state residents will be hit with big increases in oil, gasoline, natural gas, and electricity prices as a result of a "climate superfund" tax many Democrats want to levy against energy producers to punish them for letting state residents use their fuels for the last century. Of course the energy producers won't pay the tax by themselves; they'll recover the cost by raising prices and the public will pay. But people will blame the energy producers, not the elected officials who enacted the tax and quickly took their "tax rebates" away.

The Republican senators, previously tribunes of fiscal responsibility, have counter-proposed sharp reductions in the state income tax and property taxes on cars, $1.5 billion worth — reductions that might endure year after year.

The Republican senators also would eliminate state government's "public benefits" charges on electric utility bills, which help to make Connecticut's electricity prices nearly the highest in the country.

Sen. Ryan Fazio, R-Greenwich, a candidate for his party's nomination for governor, says, "There is so much pork stuffed in our public benefits tax that it would boggle the mind — over 50 different government programs passed by the legislature and the governor over many years."

Indeed, but Governor Lamont notes that some of the "public benefits" charges are not "pork." They also pay for a guarantee of electricity supply from the Millstone nuclear power station in Waterford and for management of the regional electric grid. Some of the charges would be more honestly and transparently placed in the state budget and financed by general revenue rather than by what is essentially a sales tax on electricity, but they'd still have to be paid, and eliminating the "public benefits" tax won't save as much money as Republicans imply.

So where is the rest of the money for the Republican tax relief to come from?

The Senate Republican leader, Brookfield's Stephen Harding, says: "We have a $4 billion-plus 'rainy-day fund.' The people of the state have essentially been overtaxed by that much."

Not really. This claim is wrong for the same reason Gov. Lamont, Democratic legislators, and state Comptroller Sean Scanlon are wrong when they claim that state government lately has produced balanced budgets with surpluses.

For the state employee and teacher pension funds are still underfunded by $35 billion or more, so the "rainy-day fund" and the supposed surpluses are really just borrowing from the pension funds and pushing their burdens deeper into the future, when they will thrust on taxpayers who weren't even born when the pensioners were working, taxpayers who never benefited from the pensioners' services.

When it comes to state budgeting and taxes, there are really only three ways of serving the public better: reducing the burden of government, improving services and making them more efficient, and eliminating the inessential. Connecticut fails badly in these respects.

The failure starts with state government's failure to care about actual results. State government equates success with merely spending money even as important results worsen, including education, poverty, payroll control, and corruption. The Democrats can't find anything to cut, especially since most failures profit Democrats, and the Republicans are too few and averse to being frank about the horrible.

Two-hundred-dollar "tax rebate" checks may help voters overlook failure but they won't fix or improve anything.

The most powerful crime syndicate in history

GUEST COMMENTARY JAMES SPEYER

It is time to acknowledge what has become tragically obvious: the Trump administration is essentially acting as a massive criminal enterprise. It lies, steals, extorts and murders – all while cloaked in the awesome authority of the state. It is on a crime spree that puts Al Capone to shame.

This is not hyperbole or hyperventilation. It is our reality, as the facts amply demonstrate. This administration has:

- Murdered Renee Good and Alex Pretti, slandered them as "domestic terrorists" and "assassins" and allowed their killers to walk free;
- Unleashed thousands of minimally trained ICE agents, recruited with explicitly white supremacist messaging, to inflict terror on people of color;
- Repeatedly violated the constitutional rights of citizens and non-citizens by arresting them for First Amendment-protected speech, raiding their homes without judicial warrants, and imprisoning them without due process;
- Killed dozens of civilians on the high seas solely on the unsubstantiated claim that they were drug runners (not that being drug runners would justify their summary executions without due process anyway);

- Released hundreds of imprisoned felons who brutally beat Capitol police officers on January 6;
- Converted the once-independent Department of Justice into an instrument of personal retribution via the prosecution of cooked-up lawsuits against the President's enemies;
- Threatened to seize the territory of a sovereign nation (a NATO ally no less);
- Sought to imprison United States Senators simply for exercising their free speech rights by reminding military personnel of their undisputed duty to disobey illegal orders;
- Tried to impose ruinous and unconstitutional sanctions on some of the country's largest law firms simply because Trump doesn't like them;

- Violated court orders on a massive scale. As the Chief District Judge of Minnesota recently wrote, "ICE has likely violated more court orders in January 2026 than some federal agencies have violated in their entire existence;"
- Shaken down some of the country's largest universities by illegally threatening to withhold funding; and
- Engaged in breathtaking corruption: as the conservative writer David Frum stated, "Trump's scale of stealing and bribe-taking has never been remotely paralleled in any democratic country ever before."

And that's just for starters; there are dozens more examples.

It is difficult to comprehend the level of state-sponsored criminality we are witnessing because our country has never experienced anything like it. It is also difficult to absorb because it is happening so quickly, and on so many different fronts. In the words of the 2022 movie, it sometimes feels like "Everything Everywhere All At Once." And that can be exhausting, numbing, and overwhelming.

But viewing the Trump administration as a massive crime syndicate allows us to be clear-eyed about what is coming down the road, and to plan accordingly. To take the most urgent example, there ought to be no question as to whether Trump will try to steal the midterm elections. Of course he will try to steal them. Criminals gonna crime. He tried to steal the 2020 elections, and the lack of any consequences for that supremely traitorous act only further emboldened him. It is every patriotic American's duty to oppose the coming effort to nullify the will of the voters.

That this administration can reasonably be viewed as a criminal enterprise should not be cause for despair. The courts have rejected many of the administration's power grabs and unconstitutional or illegal acts. The President is less popular than he has ever been. Prominent Republicans are defying him more than ever. The brave citizens of Minneapolis are showing us how effective organized resistance can be. And Bad Bunny, with his Super Bowl message that "The only thing more powerful than hate is love," gave us reason to believe that kindness, compassion and decency will prevail.

This winter has been tough on homeowners with regards to energy costs and the shortage of propane has not helped matters. This spot shortage is blamed on the frigid weather we have endured that has also impacted the delivery logistical networks. As a quick aside, we had a house whose propane furnace stopped working and Carlson Propane saved the day over the weekend, so kudos to Carlson!!! If you have propane as your primary heat source and it is proving challenging, here is a link to the Connecticut Energy Assistance Program which may prove to be helpful: uwc.211ct.org/connecticut-energy-assistance-program-2023-2024/think anytime we can say that that percentage of kids have a positive outlook, and they, you know, have hope about where they're going, that's a great thing," Brady-Shanley said.

Ian Strever, principal of Housatonic Valley Regional High School, said the survey remains an essential planning tool.

"This report and its predecessor, the Developmental Assets Survey, have always been incredibly useful tools for assessing not only our students' risk-taking and social behaviors, but also how we support them through school programs and the larger community of Region 1 town services," Strever said.

Stress, anxiety and emotional health indicators

Despite the positive indicators, emotional strain remains a concern.

More than half of students in grades 7 to 12 — 57.1% — reported experiencing stress or anxiety "some of the time" in the past year.

Another 14.5% reported feeling stress or anxious "almost always" and 6.5% reported feeling that way "always." Only 21.8% reported feeling stress free.

About 18.3% said they felt sad or hopeless for two consecutive weeks during the past year.

Brady-Shanley said these findings reflect what teachers have been seeing in recent years.

"You know, if we were to go back 10 to 15 years, I don't think that we would be seeing the percent of anxiety that we see right now," she said. "I think there are two main triggers: COVID-19 that did not help anyone, with social isolation. And I think number two, social media has had a huge influence on kids' anxiety."

The survey also found troubling data: 15.4% reported thoughts of self-harm in the past year, 7.8% reported engaging in self-harm behavior and 9.8% reported having considered suicide in the past 12 months.

CHART PROVIDED

A majority of Region One students reported experiencing stress, anxiety or worry at least some of the time during the past year, with about one in five saying they felt that way "almost always" or "always".

Brady-Shanley said these figures highlight the importance of support systems, and are being taken very seriously.

Speaking of the suicide figure, she said: "Any number with the exception of a zero is concerning."

The percentage considering suicide was highest among grades 7–8, where 10.9% considered it, compared to 9.2% for grades 9–12. Among students who considered suicide, 23.1% said they made a plan, and 13.8% reported attempting suicide.

Brady-Shanley said the district has implemented annual training programs to help staff recognize and help students with mental health issues.

"Part of what we're doing is giving staff the tools to be able to recognize when a kid is in crisis."

She added that the district recently secured funding to continue three additional social workers at the elementary school level.

The goal, she said, is to ensure schools are prepared to respond quickly when students show signs of crisis.

At Cornwall Consolidated School, Principal Leanne Maguire said the middle school findings are particularly concerning.

"The survey results for our 7th and 8th graders are particularly startling. When we see that 94% of middle schoolers in our region have experienced anxiety in the past year — and that [nearly] 11% have considered suicide, while 20% of those have reported self-harm, it moves beyond a 'trend,' and into a call for immediate action. These aren't just statistics; they are the daily lived experiences of our students."

Maguire said she will ask town officials to support expanding the school counselor position to full time.

Early access to smart-phones and screen use

Most students receive their first smartphone between the ages of 11 and 13, with social media accounts typically beginning between 12 and 14.

"I would love to see the access to social media going to like 16 and above," Brady-Shanley said. "I think the little brain of a 12- to 14-year-old is not ready to handle the very adult world of social media."

Currently, more than 97% of students reported having a social media account prior to age 16, according to the study. Nearly 90% had smartphones before reaching 14 years of age.

Approximately 58% of students said social media helps them feel connected. At the same time, about one-third reported difficulty stopping scrolling, and roughly 25% said they felt left out at times because of social media.

Substance use remains below state, national levels

High school students in Region One continue to report substance use rates below Connecticut and national averages.

For the month prior to the May 2025 study, 10.7% reported drinking alcohol — roughly half the statewide rate of 21.1% and the national rate of 22.1%. Marijuana use was reported by 8.1% of students, compared with 14.7% statewide and 17% nationally. Meanwhile, 7.4% reported vaping, lower than Connecticut's 11.5% rate and far below the 16.8% national figure. Cigarette use was low at 2.9%.

"Fantastic. I think it speaks to what parents are teaching their children at home. It speaks to what we're, you know, encouraging from the school perspective," Brady-Shanley said. "Kids do listen when their parents talk to them about this kind of stuff."

Strever said the high school has seen measurable progress.

"One of the most encouraging takeaways from the 2025 report is the continued downward trend in substance use among HVRHS students. When comparing this data to the 2023 report, we observed a notable decrease in 30-day vaping rates, which dropped from 10 percent to 6.9 percent. We also saw slight declines in the reported use of alcohol and marijuana. These shifts suggest that prevention education and the healthy choices being made by our student body are trending in a positive direction."

Bullying still present

While bullying remains present, the survey suggests it is not pervasive for most students. About 39.4% said they have never been bullied, and 43.5% reported having been bullied at some point — but not within the past 30 days.

Still, 10.3% reported occasional bullying in the week prior to the survey, and 6.8% reported frequent or near-daily bullying in the three weeks leading up to the study.

While bullying remains a concern, the vast majority of students did not report recent incidents.

"So I think 40% of our kids reporting that they've never been bullied is honestly ... a strong number," Brady-Shanley said.

She said adult intervention appears consistent when incidents occur.

"If adults are seeing something, they're not just passively letting it go by," she said. "I think you'll see that more frequently at the younger levels. You know, high schoolers tend to be a little bit more reserved with their requests, sometimes for assistance, yeah."

The most common forms of bullying were name-calling, rumors and social exclusion.

High school sexual behavior and communication

Among high school students, 48.4% reported having talked with a parent or guardian about birth control, sexually transmitted infections or delaying pregnancy.

Brady-Shanley said this number needs to be higher.

"Parents need to talk more to their kids and I need that number to be 100%," she said. "We want our kids and our families having conversations about their children's physical health and ultimately their mental health. Kids listen when their parents talk"

Brady-Shanley said the survey ultimately reflects both progress and ongoing work.

She said the district will continue reviewing the findings with administrators and staff, using the data to guide prevention programs and student support services.

"For the most part, our kids feel like they have a trusted adult in their life," she said. "But we still have some work to do."

7.07%, and Herrick said Tuesday, Feb. 17 that the number was down to 6%.

The current budget is $18,485,210.

On Feb. 2, Herrick explained that Region One has contractual obligations — including salaries and benefits — that are up between 4% and 4.5%, and a health insurance increase of 13.5%. Together those two categories account for 53% of the increase.

Pupil Services, which includes special education, accounts for another 37% of the increase, mostly for outplacements and transportation.

"That gets you to 90%" of the increase, Herrick said, adding that supplies and equipment accounts for another 5%.

The budget committee and administrators are continuing to search for potential savings. Herrick said two retirements in the special education department could provide an opportunity to leave one position unfilled.

"There are a lot of things in play," he said. "The goal is to reduce the budget and avoid impacting student learning."

Herrick said the budget committee will present the budget proposal to the board in early April.

The public hearing will be held a couple of weeks after that, and the districtwide referendum will be on Tuesday, May 5.

HOSPITAL

Roman's first day in Sharon. During a pause in his orientation, Roman, a first-year resident also known as an "intern," said he was drawn to family medicine for its interpersonal nature.

"I like the relationships you build with patients — you get much closer to them," Roman said. "You see them much more frequently."

"You're just kind of more known in the rural setting as opposed to an urban setting."

Family medicine practitioners also need to be nimble, with a "broad scope of practice" he said — an important asset for a primary care doctor in a rural setting where specialized consultants may not be immediately available.

"You really don't know what's coming through the door at your office. It's different every day."

The Sharon rotation, where there are far fewer residents and consultants on hand than at larger hospitals like Danbury, is less "compartmentalized" than rotations at those facilities, Newton said. The residents are exposed to a much wider breadth of care, which is a "great experience learning wise."

Most residency programs are urban based, she explained. Roman said that was a motivation for him to seek the rural track at New Milford, which offers the educational breadth he was seeking. Transitioning from a background in rural care to urban is relatively simple, he said, but it's much harder to go the other way.

Roman, who was born in Egypt, raised in Winnipeg, Canada, and went to medical school in Dublin, Ireland, has only been in the area since July when he started his residency. He isn't positive yet that he'll remain in the area when it's done, "but it's never something I'd rule out."

Newton said that she's optimistic that the program will appeal to residents who are motivated by close patient-physician relationship and a broad spectrum of care.

"I'm hoping that some of the residents will love it here and want to stay, because we really, really need primary care doctors!"

CHOCOLATE

Tim Paradise, who moved to Kent with his family seven years ago and whose daughter Emily is in kindergarten, said, "We came last year and really enjoyed it. And my daughter loves chocolate."

Board member Debbie Moerschell, who was busy wrapping plates in plastic bags, said her daughter was a recipient of the scholarship. "We are very grateful. It helped tremendously."

Christina Memoli was there with her 9-year-old son Rowan. "He was excited to find my photo on the poster that showed scholarship winners," she said. "I received one from 1995 to 1998. I absolutely support this event every year. And everyone loves chocolate."

Well, not everyone. Nine-year-old Kaelyn Saunders is not a fan. She scouted out items, such as a lollipop and pretzel, to eat. "She's never liked chocolate," said her mother Marci Saunders, the school's physical education teacher. "When she filled a plate, I told her to be sure to get something her mother would like," she said with a smile.

Board members Carol Spelbos and Lee Sohl are the main organizers of the fest. Spelbos expressed her gratitude to the many businesses who contributed items, which included B.D. Provisions, Wilson's, 45 on Main, Kent Kitchen, Cozzy's, Old Oak Tavern, Bulls Bridge Inn, Marvelwood School, Kent School students, South Kent School, Swyft, IGA, KPG, Stop & Shop, JP Gifford and 109 Cheese. Nonprofits, such as the Kent Land Trust, the KCS PTA and Project Sage had booths to dispense information about their causes.

Since the fund's establishment 65 years ago, 1,512 grants totaling more than $2 million have been awarded. Students who have attended seventh and eighth grade at the school and are seeking college degrees, are in post-graduate programs or pursuing technical or vocational school certificates are eligible to apply.

Funds are raised through an annual letter of appeal and through the redemption and recycling of beverage containers. The beverage container recycling program alone has raised nearly $232,000 over the past 32 years.

Thirty-five scholarships are awarded each year. The average grant is $2,500. Post graduate awards are generally higher.

The story behind Dugazon

By Jennifer Almquist

Bobby Graham and his husband, Matthew Marden, opened their home and life-style shop, Dugazon, in a clapboard house in Sharon six months ago. Word spread quickly that their shop is filled with objects of beauty, utility and elegance. Graham and Marden tell a story of family, tradition, joy, food, community and welcome.

Jennifer Almquist sat down with the couple for a conversation about design, storytelling and building a life — and business — together.

Jennifer Almquist: When did this dream begin?

Bobby Graham: This truly is a dream come true. I wanted to open this shop for more than 30 years, to

Geary Gallery relocates from Millerton to Salisbury

By Sally Haver

Geary, a contemporary art gallery with roots on New York City's Lower East Side, is opening a new chapter in Salisbury, relocating to a restored 1840 building at 14 Main St. after five years in Millerton. Owned by Jack and Dolly Bross Geary, it was at 34 Main St. in Millerton and is reopening in the handsome teal-colored, two-story building built in 1840 and until recently owned by the interior design and architecture studio of Hendricks Churchill. Geary's first show in the new building is scheduled for Feb. 21 and will feature the work of one of the gallery's five artists, Alan Prazniak.

"Our lease on the gallery space in Millerton was coming up in March, and we questioned whether or not to renew," Jack Geary said. "We were interested in owning our next space, and fortuitously, the Salisbury building came on the market." The new building offered more space than the Millerton

ART

Taha Clayton's 'Historic Presence' opens at Tremaine Gallery

By Natalia Zukerman

For Brooklyn-based artist Taha Clayton, history isn't something sealed behind glass. It breathes, moves and stands before us in the bodies of everyday people. His upcoming solo exhibition, "Historic Presence" at the Tremaine Gallery at Hotchkiss, takes its philosophical cue from James Baldwin's declaration that "History is not the past. It is the present."

Clayton's luminous portraits center on elders, friends and acquaintances whose quiet dignity embodies what he calls "the common everyday story" often missing from official narratives. "The historical is talking about something from the past," Clayton said, "but these are men and women that are living in this day, walking with the ancestors, creating the stories."

Clayton describes the series as rooted in a search for these overlooked narratives. "It started with Baldwin and John Coltrane... and then it blossomed to the people of the times, the stories that get overlooked." His subjects are people he knows or meets through everyday encounters. "It's the models, it's their lives. It's us collaborating, as opposed to me putting a costume on someone," he said.

Born in Houston, raised in Toronto and now based in Brooklyn, Clayton brings a cross-cultural sensibility to classical realism. His figures frequently appear in clothing inspired by mid-20th-century style, echoing the visual language of the 1930s through '50s. But rather than nostalgia, he's after something more layered, a kind of collapsing of timelines. "I'm documenting this moment," he explains, "but I'm also challenging myths and creating new ones."

The use of fabric is a striking element in Clayton's work, operating on both aesthetic and symbolic levels. "I'm playing on ideas like 'being cut from the cloth,' 'the thread' of an idea," he explained. The act of painting on cotton alone carries layered historical meaning, but he deliberately reframes it as a site of empowerment. For him, cloth/cotton signals ceremony, resilience and transformation.

Clayton has an evolving and deepening relationship with this area. As an artist-in-residence at the Wassaic Project in Amenia, he said, "We were the first residency out of the pandemic, and I brought my wife and daughters. It was a two-week residency that ended up being the whole summer. It just kind of evolved and that's how my relationship upstate has been." His series "The Cloth" was presented at Troutbeck in Amenia in 2022 and he has returned as a featured speaker and educator for the Troutbeck Symposium, the multi-day gathering at Troutbeck where middle and high-school students present year-long research projects on under-told local and national histories. "It's been four years I've been with them, so I'm like artist/mentor now," said Clayton.

Clayton will be in residence again at Hotchkiss for the week leading up to the opening, offering students multiple ways to engage with the artist and providing a rich, hands-on experience of his practice as well as his guidance. "Taha is a re-

FOOD

Bold flavors with a side of punk attitude at No Comply Foods

By Jennifer Almquist

At No Comply Foods in Great Barrington, skate culture, punk music and globally inspired comfort food collide in a pink frame house on Stockbridge Road where community matters as much as what's on the plate. Opened in 2024 and named for a skateboarding trick, the restaurant hums with eclectic music while its walls double as a gallery of patron-gifted art — brightly colored skateboard cartoons, portraits of the owners' pug, Honeybun, and offbeat collages.

High school sweethearts Julie and chef Steve Browning both loved skateboarding and punk music, especially the 90s California ska-punk band, Skankin' Pickle. They also share a love for good food and a strong sense of community and fairness. After stints at Lutèce and the 21 Club in New York City, Steve helped open Prairie Whale in Great Barrington as the inaugural chef and worked there for 10 years. His partner, Julie, is a full-time special education teacher at Housatonic Valley Regional High School in Falls Village.

They opened No Comply Foods with their unique vision. "It's a place that we did on our own terms," said Julie. "Despite people trying to tell us things that we needed to do to be a successful restaurant, we do the things that we want to do." Those things include no alcohol, no tips and no reservations. "It's a place that anybody can come into, just sit down, eat and feel welcome. A complete reflection on who Steve and I are, and who we have been. That's what this place is."

Clearly, their formula is working. In its August 2025 issue, Bon Appétit Magazine named No Comply Foods one of the 14 best new breakfast spots in the U.S.

Brunch on the first warm Saturday this winter offered Turkish eggs with labneh; two sunny-side-up eggs on a Japanese sweet potato topped with chili crisp; tender soft-boiled eggs resting on steamed spinach with silky béarnaise sauce, rye toast and smoked bacon; a plate piled with buttermilk pancakes with a dollop of maple butter and circles of powdered sugar; and mugs of strong coffee. The place stayed packed for hours, every seat filled as families fresh create something containing all the things I've loved that have inspired me.

Matthew Marden: Dugazon has exceeded our expectations. Having our own business, no longer part of a large corporate structure, allows us to tell our stories and work together.

JA: What is your earliest memory that set you on your journey?

BG: My earliest memories include going to flea markets and antique shops with my mom. I still have my vast collection of wooden animals that my mom started when I was a little boy.

JA: What are your earliest memories that drew you to beauty, design and fashion?

MM: I've always been a visual person. I was fascinated with The Muppet Show and Sesame Street. I loved their imaginative worlds. It was the late '70s, and I remember being oddly interested in pop culture, loving the colors and textures of the different puppets, their crazy hair or colorful fur.

JA: What were your favorite stories growing up?

MM: I grew up in Hopkinton, a small town in New Hampshire. I loved "Goodnight Moon." I remember C.S. Lewis' Narnia books and their combination of fantasy and reality. I was a voracious reader, drawn to the more macabre world of Stephen King. My dad read me "Watership Down." I remember the "Madeline" books. I was terrified by the nuns.

BG: I loved books that were visual, especially a pop-up book called "The Great Menagerie," published by the Metropolitan Museum in the '70s. I loved "Danny the Dinosaur" and "Cloudy With a Chance of Meatballs."

JA: What roles do family and tradition play in your lives?

BG: My mom was a home-maker in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, where I grew up, but she was from Baton Rouge. I spent three weeks every summer with my grandparents in New Orleans. It was all about food and family. In our home, Matt and I keep those traditions alive.

MM: We have been married almost two years, but we've been together 20 years. When we first started dating, we discovered that despite being from different parts of the country, we had much in common. Family is important to us both.

JA: Are your families supportive of your new venture?

BG: They're so proud of us. My dad calls every day.

JA: Matt, what drew you to fashion as a career?

MM: I studied art history in college. For five years, I worked at a New York fashion photography gallery, Staley-Wise. I worked at Town & Country, was a fashion director at Interview, then fashion director at Details magazine, where I stayed most of my career. I became style director at Esquire.

JA: Bobby, what was your experience in advertising and publishing?

BG: I worked in banking for a couple of years using my business degree, but it just wasn't right. I went to work at Condé Nast as a sales executive for Vogue, GQ, Vanity Fair, AD and The New Yorker.

JA: How did you meet? When did you marry?

MM: It was my first morning at Details. I noticed Bobby in the elevator. We were married in August 2024.

JA: What is your business philosophy?

BG: My business philosophy is that you work hard, you have integrity, you have fun and the money will come. There are no shortcuts in life.

MM: At Dugazon, we sell what we love.

JA: What is your most beautiful, most favorite item in Dugazon?

MM: A photograph by our friend Matt Albiani called "Lost," shot under a pier in the summer. We had a copy in our house on Fire Island for years.

BG: My favorite item is our candle wall. I just love the way it presents visually. I love the colors.

location — 5,000 square feet on two floors in turnkey condition. "In addition to three exhibition rooms, there's even a bedroom with an en suite bathroom for a visiting artist to stay," said Jack.

The Gearys founded their gallery in 2013 on the Lower East Side in New York City, then moved to Varick Street in SoHo before landing at their final New York City location on the Bowery in 2020. When the COVID-19 pandemic hit and the Gearys found themselves living primarily in their Lakeville home, they discovered the Millerton space on Main Street. With its white walls and track lighting, they determined it would be the perfect spot for a gallery. As it turned out, having two geographically disparate spaces proved cumbersome to program and maintain, so they consolidated their efforts in Millerton which they will transfer to Salisbury.

The Gearys are already planning events for the new space, including art classes, lectures, readings and parties. During the gallery's time in Millerton, from 2020 to the present, Geary hosted 28 exhibitions, as well as performance art events, poetry readings and dinners celebrating exhibitions. Most recently, they hosted a dinner for artist Dana Sherwood in conjunction with her exhibition. Ever the creative artist, Sherwood made all the plates, candlesticks and serving bowls used at the dinner.

The gallery currently represents five contemporary artists: Will Corwin, Tura Oliveira, Alan Prazniak, Reeve Schley and Sun You. Most are painters, though some also work in sculpture and installation. "We are focused on showing our represented artists," Dolly said, "but we also enjoy showing other artists with whom we have relationships." The Gearys have exhibited at art fairs in Miami, Chicago and San Francisco and have placed works in museum collections and exhibitions, raising artists' profiles and building momentum for the gallery's future.

Alan Prazniak, whose work will be featured in the opening exhibition, describes the show, "Earth Tones," as "a collection of work that chronicles the time after moving my studio to the Catskills from Brooklyn in 2024. 'Tones' refers to the colors, but also — maybe more importantly — to the frequencies of the mountains. There's a music to them; it can be overwhelming if you let it in. Staring at a giant hill in the distance, listening to it hum, falling under the spell of whatever's out there. But finally turning your back to it to go into the studio, trying to make something of it."

Geary is open Friday through Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and by appointment. Information is available at info@geary.nyc

A taste of spring at the annual bulb show

By Robin Roraback

The Berkshire Botanical Garden in Stockbridge is offering the perfect solution to the winter doldrums with its annual Bulb Show, beginning Feb. 20. Depending on how long the bulbs bloom, the show is estimated to run until about March 20.

Inside the Fitzpatrick Conservatory, hundreds of tulips, daffodils and grape hyacinths will be waiting to give visitors a welcome taste of spring.

Some rarer blooms to look for are the “Hoop Petticoat Daffodil” (Narcissus bulbocodium) and three from South Africa: “African Corn Flag” (Chasmanthe bicolor), “Fairy Bells” (Melasmaerula ramosa) and “Forest Lily” (Veltheimia bracteata).

Preparation for the bulb show begins in summer, when bulbs are chosen and ordered. They are planted in fall and then spend about 15 weeks at temperatures simulating winter.

tor of horticulture at BBG, explained. “We have two small, air-conditioned rooms, or CoolBots, in the basement. We pull out our pots of bulbs in three stages. The first pull was Feb. 7, and since we didn’t get too much sun last week, they are off to a bit of a slow start, but they are all budded up and I’m sure we will have blooming bulbs for our opening day.”

A point of interest besides the blooms is the display of succulents. Ruquist said to look for “hens and chicks, aloes, agave and sedum.”

“The Bulb Show is BBG’s gift to the community,” Ruquist said. Admission is free, but donations are welcome. Multiple visits are encouraged to enjoy a range of blooms.

Berkshire Botanical Garden is located at 5 W. Stockbridge Road, Stockbridge, Massachusetts.

Garden Matters

The Millbrook Garden Club and Millbrook Library are launching a “Garden Matters” series, a free lineup of talks, walks and workshops on eco-friendly gardening presented with Stonewood Farm. Beginning Feb. 21 and running through July, the program highlights local experts sharing practical tips on soil health, regenerative growing, native plants and pollinator habitats.

Sessions include a soil-building workshop with farm managers, a creative seed-starting class led by Jessica Williams of Odd Duck Farm, a pollinator garden walkthrough with designer Andrew J. Durbridge, and a native meadow tour at the Cary Institute guided by president Joshua Ginsberg. All programs are free and open to the public at the library unless noted. Details and schedule updates: millbrooklibrary.org.

COMMUNITY

Winter Weekend in Norfolk

The Ninth Annual Winter Weekend Festival returns to Norfolk, Feb. 21–22, offering a full slate of seasonal activities for all ages. The community celebration features outdoor adventures such as hiking, skiing and wildlife walks, alongside concerts, art shows, workshops, open studios, historic exhibits and family events. Highlights include live music, artist meet-and-greets, a pickleball tournament, stained-glass tours, craft demonstrations and a “Blizzard of Fun” kids program. Many activities are free, with select ticketed workshops. Early-bird events begin Friday evening with a pop-up gallery reception and documentary screening. Visitors can also enjoy special café and bakery offerings throughout the weekend. Organizers encourage guests to check the festival schedule at week-endinnorfolk.org for updates and return this summer for the three-day Weekend in Norfolk celebration July 31–Aug. 2.

markable artist to work with because he meets students where they are,” said Tremaine Gallery director, Terri Moore. “He listens deeply, treats their ideas with real respect and shows them that their own stories are worthy subjects. That combination of humility, rigor and generosity is rare — and it’s why students respond to him so strongly.”

Clayton’s career has garnered international — even interstellar — recognition, including exhibitions in cities from New York to Barcelona. One of his works was selected for the Lunar Codex’s “Nova Collection” in 2024, part of an ambitious global archive designed to preserve creative works on the Moon as a time capsule of human culture. Clayton recalled the moment the capsule landed with characteristic understatement: “I’m just on the computer watching with a beer thinking, ‘Ok, this is cool.’ But, like the next day, I still had to get up and take the kids to school.”

Interspersed throughout the gallery are ceramic shields that add to the warrior-like quality of some of the subjects. The repetition of a water fountain is particularly evocative, another reclamation that amplifies history without obscuring the truth that shaped it.

Clayton describes his practice as a form of meditation, saying he feels time dissolve while working. “It’s like past and future is all happening,” he said. That sense of temporal layering resonates with the exhibition’s central idea that personal memory and collective history are inseparable. Clayton’s portraits are about recognizing and celebrating the magnitude and multitudes contained in ordinary lives, the reclamation and attention to historical detail and the carrying of history forward with incredible beauty and unwavering dignity.

The Grace Note speakeasy

By Aly Morrissey

The Stissing Center officially opened The Grace Note on Friday, Feb. 13, a new speakeasy-style venue aimed at turning Friday nights into a weekly home for local and regional talent. Hidden in the basement of The Stissing Center, The Grace Note certainly has the feel of a speakeasy, with its brick walls, dim lights and fully stocked bar. Executive Director Patrick Trettenero welcomed the first sold-out crowd and said the inspiration for the reimagined venue came from a desire to offer performances that connect audiences with artists in an intimate setting.

The debut performance featured Natalia Zukerman, Compass Arts & Entertainment editor and Stissing Center advisory board member, who will also co-manage booking for the space as it rolls out weekly programming. From the moment she stepped onto the stage, Zukerman held the audience in the palm of her hand, leaving concert-goers hanging on her every word. There were moments of raucous laughter and moments when you could hear a pin drop.

A storyteller at heart, Zukerman wove an introspective thread throughout the night, exploring how connection, art and beauty can exist even amid injustice and a relentless news cycle. Between songs, she offered commentary and her personal reflections, while her lyrics echoed many of the same themes.

The Grace Note will be open every Friday night. For a schedule of upcoming performances and to purchase tickets, visit thestissingcenter.org

Housatonic hosts Lakeview for Rivalry Night

By Riley Klein

FALLS VILLAGE — Back-to-back basketball games were played at Housatonic Valley Regional High School Friday, Feb. 13, against rival Lakeview High School. The evening of excitement began with the girls varsity game and was followed by the boys game. Lakeview won them both with final scores of 46-26 for the girls and 72-36 for the boys.

It was a true rivalry atmosphere inside the Ed Tybursky Gym and cheering sections for both sides were full. In the home crowd, student commentators were situated courtside behind a mock ESPN sports desk.

The girls game was a physical battle with hard fouls from both sides. Athletic Trainer Erica Russell was quick to address injuries including a bloody nose and sprained thumb.

The score was close early on but as time marched on, Lakeview's girls showed why they have only lost two games this season. Star guard Allie Pape scored a game-high 18 points for Lakeview. Addie Foss scored 11, Christina Barone scored 9, Micaela Rae scored 5, Dorothy Olmstead scored 2 and Alyssa Barone scored 1.

The HVRHS girls were led by Olivia Brooks with 8 points. Victoria Brooks scored 7, Maddy Johnson scored 6, Hayden Bachman scored 2, Carmela Egan scored 2 and Aubrey Funk scored 1.

In the boys game, HVRHS wore throwback jerseys complete with overly baggy shorts that were worn in the early 2000s. Two seniors were out due to injury: Wes Allyn was still recovering from knee surgery and Owen Riemer was in a sling due to a hyperextended elbow.

Lakeview built a lead early on and stayed ahead until the end. The Bobcats were led offensively by Jack Gollow with 35 points. Quinn Coffey scored 9, Chuck Pickert scored 6, Roch Bolton scored 6, Max Guma scored 5, Renaldi Mucka scored 4, Jovany Pirro scored 4, Henry Contadini scored 2 and Connor Aldrich scored 1.

HVRHS was led in scoring by Anthony Foley with 12 points. Anthony Labbadia scored 10, Simon Markow scored 6, Nick Crodelle scored 3, Wyatt Bayer scored 3 and Tyler Roberts scored 2.

After the results, Lakeview's girls moved into first place in Berkshire League standings with a record of 16-2. The HVRHS girls were in fourth place, tied with Northwestern at 7-10.

For the boys, Lakeview remained in third place with a record of 11-6. The HVRHS boys moved to 4-13 in seventh place.
